Bringing Up Baby.

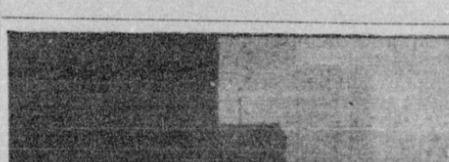

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

Toward the end of the first year, your baby's manual dexterity will improve mightily. Watch, and one fine day you'll see him (or her) accomplish the pinch-hold feat: picking up objects with thumb and forefinger. Great achievement, this. How else could we learn to write, sew, hold a fork?

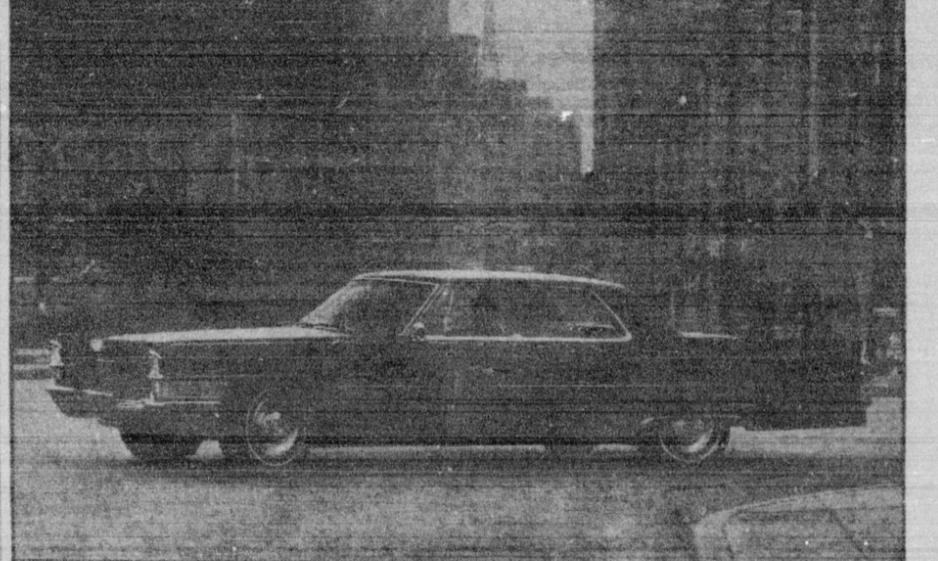

Table talk. Most toddler feeding problems fall into two classes. One is that the child doesn't eat what mother thinks is enough. The other is a refusal, some times, to eat "good-for-you" foods mother thinks are necessary. Important things to remember: a child's appetite usually wanes at the year-old stage and his appetite is a good guide to how much he should eat. Also, no one food is a must. There are several alternatives in every Gerber food category to choose from.

Lip-smacking and new, for you know who? That's Gerber Junior Vegetables and Ham with Bacon... a dinner that's bound to be downed with delight. This happy combination of vegetables, cereal and meat is deftly blended and seasoned to please even the most picknicky palates. Like all Gerber Baby Foods, it's "custom-cooked" to preserve the utmost in nutritive values. Gerber® Baby Foods, Box 72, Fremont, Michigan.

Memo from Dan Gerber. "Do you know why we 'custom-cook' your baby's foods? Because different foods require different treatment. Some foods need longer cooking time than others... some higher temperatures. Fruits, for example, are flash-cooked... sweet potatoes are slow-cooked (to break down starches into easily digested sugars). Egg yolks are processed differently from meat. But whatever the method, cooking times and temperatures are scientifically controlled to preserve the utmost in nutritive values. It's true! When you buy Gerber, you're sure of your money's worth in nourishment."
