Two Carson Tracts Get New Streets

New streets, costing subdividers $445,000 will be constructed in two tract areas in the Carson District, according to Supervisor Chairman Burton W. Chase.

Street plans have been approved by the Road Department and the Board of Supervisors for tract developments near Sepulveda Boulevard and Normandie Avenue.

When completed, the new residential streets will provide access to 358 new homes within the tracts. Work will include curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

Area Women to Graduate From Management Class

Six women executives, all men have completed in the last decade.

AREA WOMEN active in the program, the only of its kind in the nation, are: Mrs. Kathryn V. Alvarez, Torrance resident and supervisor of office services of Mattel Toy-makers in Hawthorne; Miss Andree Louise Cuenod, a Redondo Beach resident and supervisor of the communications service of TRW Space Technology Laboratories; Mrs. Mary Dunn of Hawthorne, an administrative officer of the Federal Aviation Agency.

The elite group of women executives will gather in the executive suite of the Graduate School of Business Administration Building on the UCLA campus for the ceremonies.

The 35 business and professional women have been meeting weekly for five-hour campus evening sessions since last September. Their study is modeled on the University's executive programs which some 1,000 business-

Company, and Mrs. Gloria P. Thoman of Gardena, medical record department director of The California Hospital.

Their "graduation" exercises will include a 6 p.m. reception, dinner, and an address by guest speaker Dr. Neil H. Jacoby, Dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration at UCLA, on "Foreign Trade and Foreign Aid in America's Future." Certificate awards of program completion will be presented to the women by Dr. Joseph D. Carrabino, Assistant Dean of the Executive Education for the Graduate School of Business Administration.

ACCORDING to Margaret H. Thompson, coordinator of the University Extension program and lecturer in business communication at UCLA, the special program has been a "tremendous success."

"Career women in today's business world cannot advance to middle and top level management without a broad business administration background. Records show that experience alone does not qualify people for responsible positions. Where we find successful managers, we see not only long experience, but also substantial formal management training," Mrs. Thompson said.

Designed strictly for women in management, the program enabled participating women to gain new knowledge useable in their management position in class, try it out in their jobs, and evaluate effectiveness at the next class session.
