

ADELINE DALEY

She's Running a Guest Ranch

I have been toying with the idea of buying one of those neon signs motels use to indicate "Vacancy" or "No Vacancy" and installing it in front of our house. I'm not trying to compete with the Travelodge people (although I might have a difficult time convincing anybody otherwise), but it would end some of the confusion we have over the number of guests our kids would like to have stay overnight.

Needless to say, we do not have too many extra beds so the competition for them is keen. Moreover, should one of our own kids "check out" for the night and stay elsewhere, it is an absolute necessity that the vacancy be filled. My kids don't want me "rattling around" in an empty house.

In desperation, if their friends failed them, I believe they would stop passing autos on the highway and inquire if there were any kids their age who could spend the night.

One of the most fought-over spots is the vacancy caused whenever my husband is away, because the kids figure that two of our smaller children can move in with me, leaving not one, but two open beds elsewhere. Some reorganizing is necessary, of course, and kids are shifted around the house in a sort of "musical bed" game. With me sometimes winding up on the living room couch.

I don't mind, but I can't say that my husband is enchanted with the idea of sleeping on the chesterfield. At any time. But that's what happens when he doesn't check out as scheduled. It happens in the best-run hotels.

He complains, too, when I don't fill him in on how many guests are sleeping where. What does he want me to do, have the kids sign a register? Nor will he let me forget the night he had to work late and I forgot to inform him that Elaine was having a "slumber party." The sight of 30 teenagers with their hair in rollers convinced him we were being invaded by Mars.

However, I have been forced to limit "slumber parties" to special occasions. Otherwise, I'm afraid we would have to start dividing up the vacant floor space.

In all fairness, I must add that my kids are just as anxious to sleep at a friend's home and can pack a suitcase in 30 seconds, should the opportunity arise. Sometimes, I must admit, I help them pack.

SPARTAN LAURELS

Students Cited for Campus Achievements

More than 600 students, teachers, and parents were on hand last week for the first annual Spartan Laurels Banquet at South High School. The banquet, which the school hopes to make an annual event, honored students for their academic achievements, as well as for athletic accomplishments.

Dr. John A. Lucas, principal, presented the award. He gave students a list of six questions to answer in considering their life goals.

Decorations for the banquet were in gold and white, the traditional colors of the ancient Greece bestowed on persons for outstanding accomplishments.

Highlighting the banquet was the presentation of the athlete of the year award. Cross country and track star Wes Fox was named the winner.

Other awards were presented in service, athletic, and academic areas. Winners of Spartan Laurels included:

Dan Birmingham, art; Steve Kaplan, athletic scholarship; Lee Ann Youngberg, business education; Michael Renz, drama; John Jackson, English; Jan Harrell, foreign language; Marcia Binford, Girls' Athletic Association; Alta Yock, home economics; and Jerry Norman, industrial arts.

Scout Show Tickets on Sale Here

Boy Scouts throughout this area will use the Memorial Day weekend for a major push in ticket sales for their "Land of Liberty" show. The show will be held Saturday, June 12, in the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

For each ticket sold, scouts earn commissions for their units and bonus "Scout Bucks" for themselves, which they may use to purchase Scout equipment.

All proceeds not retained by Scout troops will be used by the Los Angeles Area Scout Council to further its camping program for all boys.

SCOUTS HOPE that this weekend will see them go "over the top" in ticket sales, and fill the Coliseum for "Land of Liberty."

The show is a patriotic pageant, alternating between tableaux on special stages, and live action on the field with thousands of boys in each act.

Hollywood stars will narrate and there will be bands, fireworks, and a giant American flag the size of a football field.

IN ADDITION to entertaining the audience, "Land of Liberty" will inspire all who see it to a better understanding of our American heritage, according to General Chairman Ronald Reagan.

Tickets may be purchased from any Boy Scout, Cub Scout or Explorer, for $1 each. Children under eight will be admitted free.

HEART ASSOCIATION

In just one year (1963), your Los Angeles County Heart Association reminds you, the number of Americans who died of cardiovascular diseases (981,680) exceeded the number killed in all the wars of our country's history—from the Revolutionary War right down through the Korean War (602,339).

'Pegora' Will Fly At ECC

Scientific gobbledygook, spider webs and an assortment of witches will come to life on the stage of the El Camino College Campus Theater in the production of "Pegora, The Witch."

The children's theater performances will begin Thursday and Friday, at 7:30 p.m., with 10:30 a.m., 2:30 p.m., and 7:30 p.m. performances scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, June 6.

"Pegora" is the story of a witch who cannot be evil and is in danger of being thrown out of the witches' union. To retain her broomstick, Pegora tries to kidnap the seven daughters of the king from the nearby castle.

The story continues to a "happily-ever-after" ending, while teaching a lesson of good conquering evil.

IN A CHILDREN'S production, very unique properties are essential to capture the ideas of the young as well as older persons in the audience," commented Dr. Howard Banks, drama director.

"Music, costume and choreography have all been combined to present a 'moment of beauty' to capture the imaginations of the young audiences," Banks said.

Tickets are on sale at the student store in the Campus Center.
