Health Officer Suggests Don't Overdo Those Tans,

By K. H. SUTHERLAND, M.D.
County Health Officer

As the grey skies of June pass into brighter days, the lure of sunny beaches and poolsides becomes for many downright irresistible.

At this time, too, feminine fashion dictates greater exposure of skin—preferably skin toasted to a golden tan. The cosmetic effect of a sun-tan is courted by both men and women and there seems to be an almost universal opinion that fair-skinned people look more attractive and "healthier" when tanned.

These reasons together with the sun exposure which goes with many summer outdoor activities sometimes lead people to bask too often and too long too soon.

The first summer exposure to bright midday sun should not exceed 30 minutes, even for dark brunette individuals. Persons with fair skin should probably limit their initial sunbath of the season to 15 minutes. In temperate zones such as we have in Southern California, exposure before 10 a.m. or after 4 p.m. is much less likely to cause sunburn because the burn-producing wave lengths usually are filtered out.

REPEATED prolonged exposure to strong sunlight has a definite aging effect on the skin. A more dangerous result of many years of over-exposure is the formation of precancerous keratotic (horny) lesions on the skin.

As one group of dermatologists recently wrote, "The sun tan is definitely 'in.' But the smooth, heavily tanned skin of the 'teens and twenties will be the dry, wrinkled, and wizened skin of the forties, when liver spots, crow's feet, and keratoses prematurely appear."

Many effective sun screen preparations are available, but for prolonged protection care must be taken that they are not washed away by bathing or perspiration.

ORDINARY window glass filters out all of the sunburn-producing rays. Smoke and smog also act as filters, depending on their density, but a light overcast of clouds can be dangerously deceptive.

Many severe sunburns have resulted from underestimating the power of the sun's rays on an overcast day. Sand, water and white surfaces reflect the rays and magnify their effect. Certain drugs, such as sulfa drugs and the tetracyclines, make some people more sensitive to sunlight.

Sun is fun, but like everything else it should be taken in moderation. If you do get burned, further exposure should obviously be avoided until the acute reaction subsides. In most instances, application of a soothing emollient cream, ointment or lotion is all that is necessary. But if the burn is more severe, obtain medical aid promptly.

1948 Dividend Paid to Veterans, Says Webster

The Veterans Administration today labeled "totally incorrect and misleading" recent reports that certain veterans may still obtain up to $200 for a 1948 GI Insurance dividend, according to Mort Webster, manager of VA's Southern California Regional office.

This insurance dividend has already been paid to more than 16 million World War II veterans during 1960, according to Webster. The dividend was highly publicized and nearly all veterans who were eligible have received payment. Some few with lapsed policies were not reached by the VA due to lack of correct address.

These few are still eligible, Webster commented, but the passage of 15 years without contact indicates that many of these veterans may be dead. The Veterans Administration is carrying on a continuing program to locate the very few veterans who may still be eligible.

COMMENTING on this extensive search, Webster said a spot check of 30,000 applications out of the 300,000 received revealed only seven qualified for the dividend. A check of another 7,000 applications revealed that three veterans might qualify.

Webster called for all veterans to carefully consider their individual GI Insurance policies to make doubly sure that no previous application had been submitted. He pointed out that a further increase in the volume of these inquiries will necessarily delay current business.
