SACRAMENTO—The game of politics at times calls for some peculiar observations and the plaintiff of Charles Warren, an assemblyman from Los Angeles, who as well is the chairman of the state Democratic Central Committee, over the vetoes of legislative measures by Governor Ronald Reagan, are most peculiar when one follows them through.

It is only natural that Assemblyman Warren would come forth with a tirade against the governor, who is a member of the opposite political party and who was elected by a sound majority on a platform of calling a halt to some of the excesses practiced by the previous administration.

Warren is known in the assembly as something of a proponent of the give-away philosophy practiced in the past, which still has not been fully brought under control.

"THE ASSEMBLYMAN claims the governor is 'assaulting the tradition of government which has made California great, and the foremost place in which to live and raise a family.' Obviously, California western shores and live off the munificence of California's producing taxpayers. The state has made such a name for itself in the progress of its largess for the down-trodden that its taxes have been raised by a billion dollars, and the people who pay the taxes are wondering where the money's coming from to satisfy the collector. Warren fails to make note of this in his attack on the governor. A good question comes up as far as this subject is concerned, and Reagan must have thought about it when he vetoed the measure. The question is why should the taxpayer, who not only works for his own bread and butter, but also for that supplied to welfare recipients, be charged when the welfare recipient is earning money? Many reports have been made to the effect that it's cheaper for some people to stay on welfare than to enter the economic, productive life of the state. In other words, they "can't afford" to go to work. Yet Warren would have them subsist on the bounty of those who have to work for a living, and at the same time, earn money on the side.

Garden Checklist

1. Plant annuals for winter color now. Stocks, snapdragons, calendulas, pansies, violas and sweet peas top the list.
2. When chrysanthemums start to show color in the bud hold off on any further feeding. Make sure mums are well staked.
3. Gladioli that bloomed early should be lifted when the tops brown off. Store them in a cool place.
4. Plant Sasanqua Camellias this month so you can enjoy their early bloom — usually they start in October.

Park Fee Increases Pay Off

Capitol News Service
SACRAMENTO — Increases in fees paid by the public for use of California's state parks are paying off, William Penn Mott Jr., director of state parks and recreation, said today.

He said that for the first time in history, the state received revenue topping $1 million for a month period when the fees totaled $1,054,547.75 last July.

"This was an increase of 37 per cent over the $768,278 collected the same month last year, he stated.

"THE JULY revenue return," Mott said, "represents a return of nearly three-quarters of the total direct costs of the park system for that month. Our goal is to maintain an average yearly return of at least 50 per cent."

"In so doing, more of the costs of operating and maintaining special park facilities will be borne by those who use them, rather than by the general taxpayer."

"In past years, revenue has never yielded more than 30 to 35 per cent of direct costs."

SOME QUESTION was raised when the beach and park fees were increased as to whether the increases would reduce use of the facilities.

However, preliminary reports indicated that attendance for August this year exceeded the previous year. And although the department opened some 900 new campsites within the system this year, all campgrounds were filled, with waiting lists for from 150 to 200 in some of the areas.

Mott reported the biggest revenue source in the system is the Hearst castle at San Simeon, which brought in $155,195 last July.
