

El Camino Newspaper Rated Tops

The Warwhoop, El Camino College's student newspaper, has won its 27th All-American honor rating from the Associated College Press (ACP), according to Margaret Matheson, editor-in-chief.

The All-American rating, the highest given by the ACP rating service, was awarded on the basis of the coverage, content, and physical properties of last semester's Warwhoop.

Editor-in-chief for the All-American semester was Dale P. Boller. News editors were Marcia Smith and Chloe Capen, for the first and second halves, respectively.

EDITORS for the full semester were Gail Hershberger, feature editor; Richard Martin, assistant news editor; and Jon Vince, sports editor. Adviser is W. A. Kamrath, journalism instructor and resident of Redondo Beach.

The ACP analyzes such diverse aspects of the newspaper as news sources, leads, sports, display, photography, captions, headlines and typography.

In 28 semesters, the "Warwhoop" has been awarded 27 All-American and one First Class ratings. Honor ratings are given in five categories—fourth through first class and All-American.

WHITE WHALES . . . Two Arctic white whales, called belugas, swim in their tank at Marineland of the Pacific after a 2,000-mile journey from Hudson's Bay. The whales, a 900-pound female and a 1,100-pound male, are doing well in their new home. The addition of the white whales gives Marineland the most varied collection of whales ever assembled in one place. They are the only whales being displayed on the West Coast.

Marineland Shows White Whales

Two beluga (bah-LOO-gah) whales — the famed white whales of the Arctic — are safe at Marineland of the Pacific following a trip from Hudson's Bay.

The addition of the two beluga whales gives the Palos Verdes oceanarium the most varied collection of living whales in history.

The animals—a 10-foot female weighing about 900 pounds and a 12-foot male weighing some 1,100 pounds—are snow white in color. They normally inhabit only the icy waters of the Arctic and sub-Arctic regions.

They were trucked to Marineland from Los Angeles

International Airport after a 16-hour flight from Churchill, Manitoba, Canada, on the western edge of Hudson's Bay.

"They appear to be in excellent condition despite their 2,200-mile journey," John Prescott, Marineland curator, said.

Marineland now has four species of whales on display—the first time this has ever been accomplished in one place. Bubbles, star of Marineland's Whale Show, is a pilot whale. Swiftly, one of the rarest whales in the world, is a false killer whale. Orky, the oceanarium's 3,000-pound killer whale, was caught off Vancouver Island last July 26.

The belugas were caught by Marineland collectors Frank (Boots) Calandrino and Frank Brocato, who worked from canoes with teams of Chippewa and Cree Indians. The animals were penned until they were ready for the flight to Los Angeles International Airport.

The expedition to Manitoba was a joint venture with the New York Zoological Society.

It is the first time Marineland has displayed white whales and they are the only ones of their kind on the West Coast.

Workshops Scheduled For Adults

"Actions and Reactions," "Goals to Go," and "Needs for Now" are among the provocative topics for discussion at a one-day University of California Extension workshop exploring "Alternatives for Women — Meeting the Challenge of Change." The workshop will be held Thursday, Oct. 26, 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., at the Torrance Recreation Center, 3341 Torrance Blvd.

Designed for women seeking more meaningful personal activities, the "action" program will emphasize alternatives which are compatible with homemaking obligations and society's demands.

Workshop leader Betty Rosenstein will guide participants in a frank appraisal of their activities and attitudes. A specialist in the area of adult education, Mrs. Rosenstein has recently completed extensive research into the needs and goals of women, which will be utilized in her presentation.

A fee of $8 includes materials. Further information is available from P.O. Box 24901, Department K, University of California Extension, Los Angeles 90024.

'People' Top Chief's List Of Leading Fire Causes

"People—men, women and children — are the leading cause of fire in the United States," County Fire Chief E. Klinger reminded today in announcing Fire Prevention Week, October 8-14.

"Theme for the week is Fire Hurts," attested to by the fact that 12,100 Americans died in 1966 because of fire," Chief Klinger said. "Of these, more than 2,000 were children."

Leading cause of all fires

Enlargement Campaign Is Planned

The Sunday School of the Bethesda Assembly of God Church, 1473 W. 18th St., began its annual enlargement campaign last Sunday with the theme "I'll Tell the World."

The Sunday school seeks to encourage each member to tell others about the purpose and meaning of being a Christian, and to invite his family, his neighbor, his friends, and his community to attend the Sunday school.

Today's sub-theme is "The World Is My Family." Emphasis will be placed on families going to church together.

The public is invited to attend the Bethesda Sunday school today at 9:30 a.m.

throughout the nation is smoking and matches. "But neither can cause fires without people. We must face the fact that people are the leading cause of all our fires," Chief Klinger said.

In Los Angeles County, 100 men, women and children die each year in fires. Most are killed in their homes.

"We strongly suggest that everyone take a few minutes to make an emergency plan to follow in case of a home fire," the chief said. "Schools hold fire drills to show the youngsters how to leave in case of an emergency; the same procedure should be followed in every home."

Plan two escape routes from every room. One might be blocked by heat and smoke. A window from a bedroom often is an excellent exit. Even a second-story window often leads to a garage roof or a patio roof that can be used to leave the house.

Chief Klinger suggested that families discuss what steps they will take in case of a house fire, especially at night.

At the first sign of smoke, alert everyone in the house. Do not pull open bedroom doors and rush into hallways. Hot gases can kill.

Get everyone out of the house by pre-determined routes. Have a place to meet (by the street light, at the big tree in the rear yard, at the house next door). Call the fire department from a neighbor's phone. "When you are everyone is safe, attempt to extinguish the blaze. A fire extinguisher or garden hose may be sufficient.

Smoke and gases in a burning house often fill every room. If the smoke is thick, crawl on the floor; air is cooler there. Take short breaths.

"Your Los Angeles County Fire Department answers more than 31,000 alarms each year," Chief Klinger said. "Many are fires in homes caused by careless people. Most are needless tragedies that could have been prevented by practicing a minimum of fire safety."
