Apathetic Group Grets George Wallace at TRW

By NATALIE HALL, Press-Journal Staff Writer

Presidential candidate George C. Wallace knows who the bad guys are: communists, students, Republicans, Democrats, "pseudo-intellectuals," activists, and "pin-head professors who can't even park a bicycle straight."

Wallace finally got a chance to sport one of the answers he usually uses in abundance to taunt his detractors. When Wallace condemned both Nixon and Humphrey for supporting the open housing bill, one lonely heckler responded with a loud "boo."

"It's difficult for me to speak to an orderly crowd!" Wallace told his audience of several hundred. "It sort of throws me!" A handful of Wallace supporters rooted for their hero. A quiet apathy hung over the rest of the group.

WALLACE finally got a chance to sport one of the answers he usually uses in abundance to taunt his detractors. When Wallace condemned both Nixon and Humphrey for supporting the open housing bill, one lonely heckler responded with a loud "boo."

"I bet you don't even own a house," Wallace retorted. "You have to work to own a home. And a good barber would solve a lot of your problems!"

Crime in the streets is another Wallace peeve. And he talks about crime in the same breath with civil rights demonstrations.

"EIGHT YEARS ago when 'street problems' began in Selma, Ala., Wallace said Nixon and Humphrey praised the movement. Now, when crime is at their doorstep, he continued, his two rival candidates are calling for control of crime.

Wallace repeated his favorite illustration of the crime problem. He said the "person who bops you on the head" is out on $25 bail "before you're in the ambulance." And the next day, he went on, it's a policeman who's standing trial for arresting the assailant.

Wallace also condemned gun control. He said it would take guns out of the hands of law-abiding citizens and arm every thug with 10 guns.

THE FORMER Alabama

governor lashed out against Republican and Democratic administrations for their foreign policies during the past 20 years. Wallace said this country has spent billions in foreign aid but still has "less friends than we had before." He said the United States is pursuing a "no-win" policy in Vietnam.

Wallace stated that this country should encourage its allies to contribute men and arms to the Vietnam effort. If they refuse, he said, the United States should cut off foreign aid and demand that the noncontributors pay back all the debts they owe this country.

THE CANDIDATE recommended jail sentences for Americans who openly call for a Communist victory or organize "freedom brigades" to go to Vietnam to kill American soldiers.

Wallace concluded his speech by calling for a "return of sanity to government."

Meanwhile, a demonstrator waved a sign saying, "Wallace is Rosemary's Baby."
