

...Let's Go

By LARRY MACARAY

Day by day, good art is undoubtedly rising in value. This fact is obvious to anyone who follows the art market and begins to compare last year's prices—prices 10 years ago—and today's prices. Good art has been appreciating in value at a faster rate than any other form of investment.

It should also be obvious that there are good and bad investments of all kinds. There are real estate deals that go sour and some that create "instant millionaires." There are stocks that grow and grow in value—there are those that are losers from the start. There are people who start a business on a "shoestring" and there are many who lose their life savings entering a business they do not know anything about.

The news that we read so often about "unknown" paintings being "found" in an attic and turn out to be worth thousands of dollars, are the ones that we remember. We do not hear about the thousands of people who think that they have found a masterpiece and spend months and years trying to find out how valuable it is. All of the major museums, not to mention most of the art galleries, are constantly plagued with people with "worthless" paintings.

THE DREAM that somehow one can become extremely wealthy by some magical stroke of luck or fate seems to be a common one, whether we admit it or not. Maybe it is greed or just plain hope—but the thought that a valuable piece of art can be obtained for a fraction of what it is really worth must motivate many people to buy at art auctions.

Buying any work of art at auction is a shakey experience. Sotheby's in London and Parke-Bernet in New York are extremely reliable firms, and can be relied upon to be selling authentic works of art. Any local auction operation, regardless of how large, can leave a buyer holding the bag with worthless art.

An auction house generally will not guarantee the correctness of description, signature, marks, insignia, genuineness, or condition of any work of art sold. All items are usually sold without recourse. In other words, "Let the buyer beware." A valuable tip to remember is to know the market value of what you want to buy and inspect it thoroughly before bidding on it.

EVEN REMBRANDTS can be faked and sold as authentic. The Bowers Museum in Santa Ana has been in the news this week because of a fake Rembrandt. Merton Hinshaw, the director of the museum, was in Washington D.C. doing research under a Federal Grant when the story began in Orange County the latter part of last year.

TV-movie producer Ralph Andrews wanted to "loan" his Rembrandt to a small museum and he chose the Bowers Museum. His thought was to culturally assist a small museum and its community. He chose the correct area—Orange County has been culturally deprived for decades—the only bright spot is the Bowers Museum.

Disneyland, baseball, convention centers, and related activities are geared to bring in money—not culture. Unfortunately, the State Attorney General's office found the Rembrandt a fake. Maybe Andrews can regain his money that he paid for the painting—and just maybe, because of the publicity, someone with an authentic masterpiece (Norton Simon has a few) will donate it to the Bowers Museum.

Officers have called for a further investigation into possible charges of speeding, bolting a stop sign, and driving with no license in possession.

Police said the suspect was incoherent and glassy-eyed when he was arrested at 6:30 p.m. His car was demolished.

His 15-year-old passenger, Rickie Hubbard, 3445 Senefield Ave., was treated at Little Company of Mary Hospital for an injured left ankle.

Warrior Trails

"Homecoming" comes our way in exactly two weeks.

Elections for Homecoming Queen began last Friday when the juniors and seniors cast their votes for the 15 finalists for the title.

The top 15 were then announced at the Hawthorne game Friday night. They are Lynne Clottl, Anna Evangelatos, Alice Evans, Cathy Focarazzo, Darlene Frame, Susie Griffiths, Dorothy Harris, Laura Hennessey, Autumn Landers, Becky Miles, Cindy Sams, Linda Scheele, Linda Stonick, Kim Storz, and Gayle Veinot.

NEXT FRIDAY the whole school votes for one girl that they would like for Queen out of the finalists, and the five girls with the most votes will be announced at the Redondo football game that night. They will make up the court consisting of four princesses and the girl with the most votes, the Queen. It will be an exciting week for the fifteen girls that are waiting in anticipation.

If anyone attended West's game with Hawthorne last Friday, I'm sure you were enthralled with the halftime show, that is, if you didn't get wet! Right smack in the middle of a play, the sprinklers began going on all over the field, shooting way up into the air and really making the field a slippery mess. It was alright, we still won but that game was really "Wet and wild."

TODAY, West High's pep squad was invited to Inglewood High to perform at their pep rally as a welcome into the Bay League. The whole squad was really thrilled and couldn't get over such a nice gesture from one of their rival schools.

Saturday, the West High cheerleaders and song-queens go into competition at Arroyo High in El Monte. Staunch support could multiply their chances of placing greatly.

The freshman class held their elections for class officers last week and these were the results: Debbie Caine, president; Bill Valeska, vice president; Cindy Falcone, treasurer; and Donna Sellars, secretary. West is expecting good results from the spirited class of '69.

Prediction: Inglewood—Another victory for West High!

Results of passage of Proposition 9, commented Dr. J. H. Hull, superintendent of schools, would be "loss of local school district identity. We would wind up as one big megalopolis," he stated. "With the state telling the local board how to spend its money. Torrance citizens would no longer control Torrance schools."

"IF PROPOSITION 9 were to pass," stated city librarian Russell West, "we'd have to close at least two branch libraries. Overdue fines on books would go up to 25 cents a day. Proposition 9 would have a serious impact on the city of Torrance's plans for a new central library."

In addition to the small home owner and renter, opposition to Proposition 9 also comes from industry, said Burton Belzer, school board member. "The industrial man would rather pay property taxes than to pay income taxes. Passage of Proposition 9 would drive many industries out of the state of California," he remarked.

Urging the audience to support Proposition 9, board member Bert Lynn pointed out that the Torrance Board of Education reduced taxes by almost five cents this year while neighboring school districts raised their taxes.

Dr. Mattox concluded by pointing out that revenue and taxation will be the project of the California State Constitutional Revision Committee during the next two years. "This would be the place to tackle tax reform problems," he stated. "in a non-political atmosphere."

At Convention

Leo Salisbury and his wife Nan have returned to Torrance from Cleveland, Ohio, where they attended the 48th annual Convention and Trade Show of the National Tire Dealers and Retreaders Association, Salisbury is the owner of Leo Salisbury Tire Co. of Torrance.

"And these services can be accomplished without increasing the number of buses required and at only a nominal increase in costs, keeping within the District's original financial program," he continued.

McMillan explained that the broader range of coverage — from the original feeder lines — was developed as a result of detailed investigation of present and proposed street and freeway systems, along with present and anticipated residential and commercial development in the service area.

MORE THAN 40 cities and communities will be served by the 29 express feeder bus lines, while the 135 local feeder routes will serve the numerous communities and municipalities along and near the rail lines.

In the Airport-Southwest Corridor expresses will serve Gardena, Palos Verdes Estates, Redondo Beach, Rolling Hills Estates, and Torrance.

Local service in the corridor will include 24 routes serving stations at Rosecrans, El Segundo, Manchester, Inglewood, Crenshaw, 54th, Western, a South Los Angeles.

THE EXTENSION of Lomita Boulevard, he added, is being delayed because of the need to fill a sump which straddles the right-of-way. Horkay said the city's engineering department wants to wait until free fill dirt is available, rather than buy fill for the sump.

He described the extension of the street as part of a coordinated program to solve traffic problems throughout the area—which includes the extension of Anza Avenue to Pacific Coast Highway. Horkay feels the project should have a priority rating.

A COMMUNITY ASSET Assemblyman Thomas Gets Bills Approved

The yardstick for measuring the value of a legislator is his ability to get bills passed that benefit his district.

Assemblyman Vincent Thomas of the 68th District has not equal in winning approval of legislation needed by his district and its people.

John Moon, the Sacramento political editor of the San Pedro News-Pilot, recently wrote that Vince Thomas had an amazing ability to move legislation through committee and to ultimate passage.

Actually, there's nothing very amazing about it . . .

Vince Thomas is the dean of the California Assembly in point of service.

As the legislator with the longest point of service, he has earned the respect and affection of legislators in both houses and both parties. Vince Thomas has given help to most of them when they were freshmen at Sacramento. (He's that kind of a guy.)

Thomas has acquired vast experience, legislative know-how and invaluable friendships in his years in the Assembly.

So . . . when Vince Thomas authors a piece of legislation, other legislators listen. They know he won't waste their time with nonsense. They know Vince Thomas does his homework, and has the facts nailed down in any bill he sponsors.
